A Letter from the WNDC President

Dear Members:

I'd like to offer a warm note of thanks to all who attended our December semi-annual business meeting, and if you stayed to enjoy our special holiday lunch, you now know the kind of food and drink that our kitchen can offer. Starting with Robert Kuttner on January 11th, and concluding with Nan Aron on the 28th, plan to attend events that will help beat back the gloom of January.

As the 2016 campaign year unfolds, the Club must host a variety of electioneering events that support various candidates. For a little perspective last week, I read a recent Washington Post column by Carlos Lozada who reflected on the baffling work of being a newly-minted American. For guidance, he drew from Alexis de Tocqueville's 19th century observations on uniquely American proclivities.

"A presidential election in the United States may be looked upon as a time of national crisis," Tocqueville writes. "Long before the date arrives, the election becomes everyone's major, not to say sole, preoccupation. The ardor of the various factions intensifies, and whatever artificial passions the imagination can create in a happy and tranquil country make their presence felt....The citizens divide into several camps, each behind its candidate...The election becomes the daily grist of the public papers, ..." Now the "daily grist" is ripped from Huffington Post but what is notable is how little we have really changed. Then as now, journalists were fond of the term "blowhard" to describe politicians. Unfortunately, they would feel themselves on familiar grounds these days.

Here at the WNDC, we shall continue to promote programs this year that feed our passions as Democrats and Progressives. I was reminded recently by the Public Policy Chair, Karen Pataky, that the 75th anniversary of FDR's Four Freedoms speech--part of his State of the Union address--is almost upon us. America has indeed made strides toward securing those freedoms, but everywhere we look, there is ample evidence of what remains to be achieved. I am grateful that we continue to gather as a Club and a community to learn about, and to support Democratic ideals. See you soon, and enjoy a safe and happy New Year!

—Anna Fierst

UPCOMING EVENTS

Monday, January 11, 2016 (Evening)

Panel Discussion Featuring Robert Kuttner

Income Inequality and Higher Education: What It means for Society, Oberlin, and You

Time: 5:30 pm – 8:00 pm

Price: $5/Cash Bar

(This event is open only to WNDC and Oberlin Alumni Club members)

Panelists:

—Robert Kuttner '65, economist, columnist, cofounder and coeditor of The American Prospect magazine, and professor of social policy at Brandeis University. He was awarded an honorary degree from Oberlin in 2015.

—Amy Chen '79, Chief investment officer at the Smithsonian Institution, Oberlin trustee and member of the Board's Investment Committee.

—Hayden Arp, a third-year double degree student studying TIMARA (Technology in Music and Related Arts) and Comparative Literature. He has been a member of the College's strategic planning project.

Over the past decades, the income gap between the small proportion who are America's richest and everyone else has been growing. What are the key socioeconomic consequences that are unfolding and how in turn will they impact institutions of higher education? What does income inequality portend for the opportunities families and their students will have in selecting schools? The book will be available for purchase and signing.

Tuesday, January 12, 2016 (Luncheon)

Eileen Davis and Candy Graham Ratifying Equal Rights Amendment

The Equal Rights Amendment is still not in the United States Constitution. Join us on Tuesday, January 12, to hear how ERA activists today are advocating for its ratification. Learn, for starters, about the 3--State Strategy and the bills in Congress to lift the 1982 ratification deadline. Come hear Eileen Davis and Candace Graham of Women Matter and Use Your Power—as well as Cathy Kaelin and Tammy Simkins of ERA Action—all national leaders in this vital political movement that holds that women are equal under the law.

Thursday, January 14, 2016 (Luncheon)

Molly Sinclair McCartney America's War Machine: Vested Interests, Endless Conflicts

Journalist James McCartney, a national security expert with 30 years' experience, documented key problems with the American military in his book America's War Machine, Vested Interests, Endless Conflicts, nearly completed before his death in 2011. The time has come, he believed, to remove our nation from "permanent war footing" and to insist on accountability from the institutions that feed our war machine. In 2012, his wife Molly Sinclair McCartney was appointed a Woodrow Wilson Public Scholar in Washington, DC, to do the research and interviews to finish her husband's book. Ms. McCartney worked as a newspaper reporter for more than 30 years, including nearly 15 years at the Washington Post. Her presentation will explore her husband's findings and his prescriptions for change. The book will be available for purchase and signing.

Wednesday, January 27, 2016 (Luncheon)

Sarah Chayes Thieves of State: Why Corruption Threatens Global Security

After a decade on the ground in Afghanistan and service to two military commanders and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Sarah Chayes landed at Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, where she now works on the security implications of severe corruption. She arrived in Afghanistan as a reporter, to cover the fall of the Taliban for NPR, and then left journalism to remain there, to contribute to the country's reconstruction. She launched a manufacturing cooperative that produces skin-care products for export as an example of alternatives to the opium economy. She has now expanded her research to other crisis zones, including Arab Spring countries and Nigeria. Chayes is the author of a new book, Thieves of State: Why Corruption Threatens Global Security, which she will discuss, and of Punishment of Virtue: Inside Afghanistan after the Taliban. She is a contributing writer for the Los Angeles Times and numerous other publications.

The book will be available for signing and purchase.

Nan Aron

Panel Discussion Led by Nan Aron,
President of Alliance for Justice
Critical Issues at the Supreme Court

From workers' rights to organize effective unions, to reproductive rights, to the death penalty and criminal justice, the Supreme Court is now considering cases that could threaten our critical rights. Join Alliance for Justice President Nan Aron and additional panelists speaking from the labor, reproductive rights, and criminal justice perspectives for a discussion of key cases in the Court's 2015-2016 term. The discussion will start with clips from AFJ's just-released film "The Right to Unite" and highlight the importance of Freidrichs v. California Teachers Association, which could undermine the rights of all working Americans. Additional cases threaten criminal justice and could impact use of the death penalty. The Supreme Court recently announced it will take up at least one crucial case weighing regulations of abortion clinics. Speakers will explore these cases, the issues at stake, and why the Court matters to us all.

Florence Navarro and Dianne Lorenz*

WNDC Educational Foundation President, Michael Beidler and WNDC Accountant Valencia Locust present a scholarship check to Empowered Women International Executive Director Florence Navarro and Board Chair Dianne Lorenz for $1,850.

This EF scholarship covers the tuition for one low-income, immigrant or refugee woman to attend 60 hours of business training that will enable her to establish a micro-business leading to enhanced economic security. EWI is just one of several community outreach programs supported by your generous donation to the Educational Foundation.

Thank you from the entire Educational Foundation Board.

Paris Climate Accord Offers Hope for the World

The historic climate agreement approved on December 12, 2015, by 196 countries from all over the world has ambitious goals for reducing manmade emissions of greenhouse gases and heading off catastrophic climate change. Rich, poor, and developing countries have signed on to the agreement—showing agreement by most nations that climate change is real, dangerous, and in need of immediate action.

Impoverished and developing countries signed on because the developed world has committed to the goals of the agreement and to providing needed financial and technical assistance to countries with few resources of their own. U.S. leadership under President Obama and Secretary Kerry was crucial in achieving this landmark agreement.

The agreement has five key goals: (1) keep the global average temperature increase at 1.5 degrees Celsius (2.5 degrees Fahrenheit) above pre-industrial levels; (2) reduce the effects of deforestation and forest degradation, with stricter limits adopted every five years; (3) provide a variety of ways of financing these efforts; (4) address how to deal with damage from adverse weather events and other negative effects of climate change; and (5) track progress and detect shortcomings.

The articles below are commentary on current events--intended to encourage further reflection and debate. Except for official Board statements, the viewpoints expressed are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the official positions of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

WNDC Committee for Public Policy and Political Action (continued from page 4)

The Paris accord offers great hope but is only the first step on a very long path, with possibilities for slips and reversals at each juncture. The agreement lacks enforcement mechanisms and includes key language changes (e.g., from “will” to “should”) that leave plenty of room for failure to meet goals.

WNDC urges its members and friends to take strong action to support the Paris agreement: to press our elected leaders, especially to back the Clean Power Plan; participate in pro-climate organizations, rallies, and demonstrations; sign petitions; write letters; and continue to educate ourselves on steps we can each take to reduce our carbon footprint. We can—we must—do our utmost to use the significant achievement of the Paris agreement as a springboard to action for saving our planet, ourselves, and our descendants.

The Heartland Institute: It's Not Just the Koch Brothers

Just when it seems safe to be cautiously optimistic about positive action on climate change, here come not only the Koch brothers and ALEC (the American Legislative Exchange Council) but an organization called the Heartland Institute, which describes itself as a nonprofit “think tank” promoting libertarian-based policies. One of its key issues is denial of the reality of climate change. The Institute is in reality a fossil fuel-funded front group receiving heavy contributions from these interests and using unscientific arguments and climate misinformation to push back on any and all attempts to reduce greenhouse gas production.

As the world looked forward to the climate conference in Paris with real hope for action to slow human impact on the earth's climate, the Institute held a counter-conference on December 7 “to expose the agendas and true costs of the agreement being negotiated there” (from the Institute's website). The Institute's delegation in Paris consisted of so-called “scientists and policy experts.” However, the respected scientific journal Nature pointed out in a July 2011 editorial that the Institute's “experts” lack credibility in climate science; they review scientific research as attorneys not scientists, and their primary purpose is “muddying the waters.” The Institute's President and CEO Joseph Bast is a high school graduate with no higher education degrees or diplomas. The Institute's chief spokesman on the environment, James Taylor, is an attorney with no climate science background.

Unsurprisingly, the Koch brothers and ALEC are involved in the doings of the Heartland Institute, through donations from the Koch Family Foundation, and membership in several of ALEC's task forces. Some of the Institute's leaders have promoted model legislation to roll back renewable energy sources, which fortunately has failed in every state legislature where it was introduced.

Another project being undertaken by the Institute is paying approximately $300,000 a year (funding anonymous) to produce climate-change denial curricula for elementary schools.

With Forbes magazine featuring a weekly column by James Taylor, where he spreads climate misinformation, and Fox News and other media outlets providing a platform for Institute fellows, responsible citizens must not be complacent, overlooking threats posed by organizations such as the Heartland Institute. We need to call their phony arguments to account in every way possible. And we need to work hard in the coming year to elect representatives to state legislatures and to Congress who support rapid development of alternative fuels and strongly support all other efforts to reduce our carbon footprint on this fragile planet.
